Alexa Dilworth

Alexa Dilworth presents "Time Signatures," a natural philosophy for the "documentary" photograph. This contemplation of sustainable alternative processes (the garden darkroom) explores new modes for understanding how images live in time. The premise is to imagine photographs, conceived as analog prints on any surface, as having an existence outside of their relationship to representation, reproduction, and (re)collection, to "thingness."

Dr Kelechi Anucha

Dr Anucha is a Lecturer in Literature and Environmental Justice at the University of Manchester, and is a co-lead in the Black Health and Humanities Network. Her research focuses on temporality, care, and how genre mediates encounters with madness across cultural forms.

Sian MacFarlane

Sian MacFarlane is a Senior Lecturer in Photography at the School of Digital Arts at Manchester Metropolitan University. Her creative work is concerned with literary and folkloric readings of post-industrial landscapes, involving critical engagement with water legacies and energy futures.
